CLINICAL VACCINOLOGY COURSE

NOVEMBER 9–11, 2007

Hyatt Regency
Bethesda Hotel
Bethesda, MD

SPONSORED BY:
The National Foundation for Infectious Diseases

AND

The Emory Department of Medicine, Division of Infectious Diseases, and the Emory Vaccine Center

IN COLLABORATION WITH:

American Academy of Pediatrics
American College Health Association
Centers for Disease Control and Prevention
National Medical Association
Society for Adolescent Medicine

STATEMENT OF NEED

Vaccines are one of the greatest success stories in public health. However, challenges remain.

Many vaccine-preventable diseases have been poorly controlled, especially those that affect adolescents and adults. Improving protection with these vaccines will require greater efforts by the health care community to provide vaccines at every opportunity and to educate patients about vaccines.

New vaccines and special vaccines for international travel offer the promise of preventing ever-greater infectious disease burdens. Incorporating them into clinical practice, however, requires an understanding of their indications, contraindications, safety profiles, and how best they fit within current immunization schedules.

The critical interface between vaccine development and successful disease prevention is the primary care provider: the pediatrician, family physician, internist, nurse practitioner, and other health care providers on whom patients rely for advice. This course is designed to provide a comprehensive background in vaccinology for the practicing clinician.

COURSE OVERVIEW

This course focuses on new developments and issues related to the use of vaccines. Expert faculty will provide the latest information on both current and prospective vaccines through lectures and interactive case presentations. Leading infectious disease experts, pediatricians, and researchers will present newly available vaccines and vaccines in the pipeline, as well as older vaccines whose continued administration is essential to improving disease prevention efforts.

This course is specifically designed for physicians, nurses, physician assistants, pharmacists, vaccine program administrators, and other health professionals involved with or interested in the clinical use of vaccines. It will also be of interest to health care professionals involved in the prevention and control of infectious diseases, such as federal, state, and local public health officials. Course participants should have a knowledge of or interest in vaccines and vaccine-preventable diseases.

COURSE FORMAT

The course format will include didactic discussions, clinical case discussions, and meet the expert discussions. Each presentation will emphasize an interactive format with problem-based learning and case presentations where appropriate. The attendees will be encouraged to utilize an audience response system and participate in a lively and stimulating question and answer discussion.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

- Primary Care Physicians
  - Family Physicians
  - Internal Medicine Specialists
  - Pediatricians
- Public Health Specialists
- Nurse Practitioners
- Physician Assistants
- Clinical Practice Nurses
- Infectious Disease Specialists
- Other Health Care Professionals involved with Clinical Aspects of Vaccinology

COURSE OBJECTIVES

This course will provide the latest information on important developments in clinical vaccinology and the use of vaccines.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Multiple funding sources will be solicited to provide unrestricted educational grants in support of the course. Supporters will be acknowledged in the course syllabus.

ACCREDITATION

Continuing Medical Education Credits

This activity has been planned and implemented in accordance with the Essential Areas and policies of the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education through the joint sponsorship of The National Foundation for Infectious Diseases (NFID) and The Emory Department of Medicine, Division of Infectious Diseases, and the Emory Vaccine Center. NFID is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) to provide Continuing Medical Education (CME) for physicians. NFID takes responsibility for the content, quality, and scientific integrity of this CME activity. NFID designates this educational activity for a maximum of 16.7 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™. Each physician should only claim credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

Continuing Education for Nurses

This offering has been approved for 20 contact hours by the Maryland Nurses Association which is accredited as an approver of continuing education in nursing by the American Nurses' Credentialing Center's Commission on Accreditation.

DISCLOSURES

As a sponsor accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) NFID must insure balance, independence, objectivity, and scientific rigor in all its individually sponsored or jointly sponsored educational activities. All faculty participating in a sponsored activity are expected to disclose to the activity audience: (1) any significant financial interest or other relationship (a) with the manufacturer(s) of any commercial product(s) and/or provider(s) of commercial services discussed in an educational presentation and/or (b) with any commercial supporters of the activity. (Significant financial interest or other relationship can include such things as grants or research support, employee, consultant, major stock holder, member of speakers bureau, etc.); and (2) any intention to discuss off-label uses of regulated substances or devices. Disclosure information is reviewed in advance to manage and resolve any conflict of interest that may affect the balance and scientific integrity of an educational presentation.
